Omicron
Tapering
Global Growth

Key Highlights

- Fears about the Omicron variant, Inflation and a more hawkish FED are weighing on investors sentiment and increasing volatility in equity markets. Global growth remains above trend supported by fiscal stimulus and an accommodative global monetary stance.
- Our base scenario still see the global economy to grow above trend and inflation to fade in the second part of next year.
- Despite the fact that emergency stimulus measures are likely to be reduced in coming months, global economic growth will remain well sustained by fiscal stimulus and an accommodative global monetary stance. Less restrictions on mobility thanks to vaccines and COVID-Pass.
- Employment's data will allow the US Federal Reserve to reduce its asset purchases program in the coming months (tapering).
- Over the coming weeks, we will get a more clear idea of the nature and extent of the risk posed by the omicron variant, and greater clarity about the likely path for FED policy.

In absolute terms markets remain well priced compared to the historic average. Europe cheaper than US. Earnings estimates raised, not big room for further P/E expansion.

Macroeconomic View

World

GROWTH OMICRON

- Global growth will slow down in 2022 from a record high of 6% to a still robust 4.5 – 5% rate (mid-cycle slowdown).
- Several countries are confronted with rising COVID cases (especially in Europe), new global lockdowns are unlikely (exception: Austria). Governments, businesses, and consumers have learned how to adapt to restrictions.
- Price pressures should ease in the second part of the year as supply - demand pandemic related imbalances disappear and energy prices stabilize.

USA

LABOR INFLATION TAPERING

- Labour market progress, rising wage income and strong household balance sheet still support consumer confidence and spending.
- Supply side bottlenecks combined with strong consumer demand are still creating inflationary pressure. As bottlenecks are resolved, inflation should start to ease.
- The FED will start to reduce its asset purchases program before year's end. Rate hikes unlikely before end of 2022.

Europe

OMICRON INFLATION

- Europe is confronting Omicron. New lockdowns are unlikely. Countries are reintroducing new restrictions. Governments, businesses, and consumers have learned how to adapt.
- PMI indices still indicates solid expansion in the coming months
- Upward pressure on inflation data should be temporary.

Emerging Markets

CHINA

- Chinese economy growth slowdown has hit levels policymakers can no longer ignore and in the near term we expect incremental policy loosening. PBOC will likely cut further the bank reserve requirements rates.
- Chinese Policymakers have been willing to sacrifice short-term growth for longer-term social objectives.

Base Scenario

- Global economic expansion well above trend.
- Strong earnings recovery on the way.
- Price pressures should ease in the second part of the year.
- Monetary and fiscal policies remain very supportive.

Risks on the Base Scenario

- Issues with COVID mutations or the vaccine rollout.
- Overheated economy causes more supply bottlenecks and Inflation surprise.
- Higher taxation, weaker macro, geopolitical events.
- Chinese regulations could unnerve markets.
